

President Donald Trump has unfrozen the transfer of certain arms to Israel, which JINSA previously documented, restoring vital resupplies to help Israel following 15 months of munitions-intensive conflict. The information presented is based on public reporting and JINSA discussions with officials knowledgeable of the arms transfers.

Because arms deliveries are not publicly disclosed, it is difficult to assess exactly which supplies the United States agreed to send since October 7, 2023, versus sales that were contracted before that date and delivered afterward – nor is this list likely to be exhaustive, given backlogged and incomplete reporting of agreed arms transfers by the Pentagon.
